$1 MILLION MILESTONE WITH LIFEFLIGHT AUSTRALIA

NEW HOPE GROUP HAS DONATED MORE THAN $1.1 MILLION DOLLARS TO THE LIFEFLIGHT FOUNDATION, SURPASSING THE $1 MILLION MILESTONE IN THEIR MOST RECENT ROUND OF FUNDING AND CEMENTING THEIR ILLUSTRIOUS SIX YEAR PARTNERSHIP.

The aeromedical care provider services a large part of Queensland, including the rural communities surrounding New Acland Mine.

LifeFlight Foundation CEO Leanne Angel said New Hope's support had made a real difference to hundreds of Queenslanders in their greatest hour of need.

"Each of our rescue missions cost in excess of $12,500 so we rely heavily on our corporate partners and dedicated community members to keep our helicopters in the air and saving lives," Ms Angel said.

"Last financial year there were 206 missions performed in the Southern Downs region, 204 in the Western Downs and 165 in and around Toowoomba."

"Our partnership with New Hope has helped us saved hundreds of lives in the area."

Launched in 2011, the New Hope LifeFlight partnership financially supports the operational costs of the RACQ LifeFlight Rescue Helicopter service and champions a number of rural safety initiatives rolled out to communities around New Acland Mine.

"Beyond supporting some of our operational costs, like aircraft maintenance and fuel,

New Hope has partnered with us to help prevent accidents and improve health and safety in the communities around New Acland Mine," Ms Angel said.

"We are proud of our six year partnership and the strong ties we have built together in our local community."

General Manager of New Acland Mine David Vink said New Hope was initially inspired to help support the rescue service following its emergency response in the 2011 Queensland floods.

"LifeFlight provides an invaluable service to our community, especially to those living in more rural areas which can be a long drive away from the nearest hospital," David said.

"Working on a mine site means we take safety very seriously and we have our own Emergency Response Team that provides New Acland with highly skilled first-responders 24 hours a day."

"LifeFlight matches our passion and commitment to providing the highest level of safety possible and it has been a pleasure working with them to help support our community."

BRYMAROO RODEO GOES RENEWABLE

THE BRYMAROO RODEO AND CAMPDRAFT IS GOING RENEWABLE WITH A NEW SOLAR PANEL SYSTEM MADE POSSIBLE BY A GRANT FROM NEW HOPE'S COMMUNITY INVESTMENT FUND.

The system was installed just before Easter and will be used to aid the Brymaroo Rodeo and Campdraft Committee in delivering electricity to their events, which regularly attract up to 2,000 spectators who arrive with numerous horse floats and caravans in tow.

Committee member, Cathy Wood, said the solar panel system will go towards powering the rodeo's facilities, located about 12km from New Acland Mine, and help to provide additional electricity for the influx of competitors during events.

"As our rodeo and campdraft have grown in popularity, our committee has been working hard to continually improve our grounds and facilities," Cathy said.

"During a competition weekend our grounds are full of trucks, caravans and campervans so we have to supply quite a lot of power to accommodate everyone's electrical needs."

"The solar panels will support us in meeting demand during competitions and hopefully offset our electricity bills as we sell excess power back to the grid outside of competition times."

"We're a small committee but we've grown to host some of Queensland's best rodeos and campdrafts. Having our own solar panels will help us to offset one of our larger overheads, allowing us to invest more into the local community infrastructure."

The Brymaroo Rodeo and Campdraft Committee will not be the only group to benefit from the solar system, with numerous other organisations making use of the rodeo grounds.

"Other organisations like the local Men's Shed use our facilities," Cathy said.

"The Brymaroo Pony Club has been based at our grounds since their beginning almost 30 years ago and have hosted up to three events a year on the grounds."

"We've had a lot of community support over the years from people like New Hope Group so we try and give back where we can."

"Over the last year or so we've used our rodeo and campdraft events to fundraise a record $90,000 for local causes and groups. It's something we're pretty proud of."

During this year's Annual Brymaroo Rodeo, hosted from March 31st, the Committee welcomed their largest spectator crowd yet. Through raffles and donations on the day, five local schools and the Oakey Lions Club raised over $12,000 for their individual causes.
